Dear Mrs. Manley:

I must offer you a double apology; first, because I am so late answering your note of last week and secondly, because I can not provide what you wish.

I was out of town when your letter came and did not return to my desk until yesterday, which explains my tardiness in writing.

As for the score of the game, I make a practice of not using my score-book for games unless I am serving as official scorer of said game. I use a system of my own which is just as accurate, but which, of course, is not preserved. The result is that the best I can offer in line with what you want is this copy I had prepared for publication but which did not get in because of limited space.

In addition to these three double-plays in the first game, your team made two in the second contest. I'm sure of that but regret to say I do not have the record. It was in front of me, however, at the time I wrote the story and my facts came from that record.

Cordially, Jam L a c y
